EDWARD C. POWERS

THE theme of this yearbook is leadership. It was the staff's hope to carry messages from many prominent leaders and thinkers . . . as inspirational guides for the graduates, yes, but also as subtle compliments to those able, conscientious members of the Class of 1960 who gave so much of their time and effort to the cause of serving their class with distinction.

We sent our request letters and waited. Then came the replies — few, and in some instances, disappointing. We were learning that some leaders are too busy to reply at all; others, to reply as requested lest it reflect on some larger cause; and still others to contact for enough time to formulate such a letter. This, too, was education.

We then turned our attention to our alumni, those hardy perennials who often answer the call. From these responses we reprint in part what most succinctly answers what we had requested of our writers: what can we do to prepare ourselves for a career in leadership and service in the years ahead, and what has Assumption Prep already given us which can help in that preparation. Dr. Gerald Brault ('46) replied as follows:

"I would say that there are three things for which I shall always be indebted to Assumption. My four years there (1) profoundly influenced my attitude toward studies, (2) oriented me toward . . . a career, and (3) taught me the importance of Catholic ethics in everyday life.

". . . I feel that my attitude toward studies was instilled during my freshman and sophomore years at Assumption. It was during those two years . . . that I learned to study. Latin, which I dreaded, provided the first serious academic challenge in my life. Once beyond the elementary level, I did learn to love Latin, and in history and English I found the subjects which decided me to choose teaching in the humanities as a career. Mr. Lacroix, Mr. Loubert and Father Louis-Robert, notably helped encourage my enthusiasms for their respective subjects.

But it was Father Marius' stern intellectual whip which had the most enduring and beneficial influence upon me.

"One cannot have gone to Assumption, finally, without having been permanently oriented to approach everything in life from an ethical point of view. It would be vain, indeed untrue, for anyone to claim that knowledge invariably results in conduct. Yet at important moments in my life, it has been most valuable to know unerringly what path was the proper one for me to follow. I need hardly belabor the importance of this in anyone's life. This, then, above all else, is the most important thing Assumption did for me."

Little more need be added. Scan the pages ahead. See the men who have no doubt (though we are not in as good a position as Dr. Brault to realize it) influenced and moulded us. See the seniors of 1960 and their various successors, leaders in the classroom and out, in activities, athletic or non-athletic, social or cultural. Notice the scope and the number and the moral tone of these activities. Then reflect on why men like Dr. Brault can write as he does. Perhaps even agree with us that the elements of true leadership now and for the future are to be found here at Assumption.

My dear students:

The last decades of the 20th century in which you are destined to live will be decisive and challenging years. The astonishing achievements in the fields of science, transportation and communications which have featured the decade of the 1950s will undoubtedly be surpassed in the years ahead.

These achievements in themselves are neither good nor bad. The use that men will make of them is the decisive factor. They can be instruments of man's progress and temporal well being or weapons of his destruction. It all depends on the men who will control and use them.

How important it is then that these be men of integrity and high principle! Indeed, how urgent it is that they be men whose standards and ideals are fixed on the sound basis of religious truth and moral law!

It has been the constant aim of your teachers, as it is of every Catholic school faculty, to equip you with a code of ideals and principles based on these truths and on this divinely-decreed law. They are your safe guide-posts to happiness and to responsible, wise leadership.

It is our hope that many of you will bring your talents and zeal into the fields of science and communications, of politics and education. These are the areas which will most need the influence of the kind of moral leadership which you have been prepared to give. But whatever you do or wherever you go, be convinced that you have something that our communities and our world very much need in your heritage of a faith and a moral code which are of God. Above all, we pray that you will always have the courage to hold fast to this heritage and bring its blessed influence to bear in some small part of the world in which you will live.

Devotedly yours in Christ,

+ Bernard J. Flanagan

Bishop of Worcester

Headmaster's Message

Dear Graduates of 1960:

At long last the hour for Catholic leadership in the United States has struck. Statistics, moreover, indicate that a high proportion of our American leaders come from preparatory schools. You may draw your own conclusions as to the contribution Assumption Preparatory School should make to the burgeoning Catholic role in American leadership.

This does not mean that I would exhort all boys to become leaders. This could be confusing and possibly discouraging. I do not, however, hesitate to invite them all, you too therefore, to serve. I hope that all Assumption Preparatory graduates and those of the class of 1960 in particular, will serve their families, their country and the world-community as well as their Church and their God!

But enlightened service does not blossom haphazardly; it must be cultivated, assiduously, methodically. It is made up of many precious ingredients, ingredients which we hope your school has helped you to prepare and to blend properly. First there is the indispensable knowledge of the past, for a man not rooted in rich and firm tradition is like a falling leaf at the mercy of every breeze. Then to this wisdom of the ages must be joined the proper acquaintance with the modern world, in both its strengths and its weaknesses.

As personal experience is blended with such book-learning, there should then be born reflection, for non-assimilated, superficial knowledge will be of little avail. When and where reflection meets prayer and love, then and there convictions generally come to life. From deep convictions to action, service and leadership is but a step.

Please retain these lessons learned, at times so painstakingly, on the benches, the stage or the playing field, in the science laboratory, the library, or in the halls and rooms as well as in the chapel of Assumption. Yes, indeed, retain them and continue to apply them, to amplify their significance that you may be equal to the tasks of the challenging space-age.

Let your voices be heard, not as blustering and vain cries from leaders of darkness, but as the humble yet clear, loving yet convinced, accents of men who remember that they owe it to all they held dear in the Springtime of their youth to serve Christ and their fellow-men in Him in the Summer of their full maturity!

Oliver B. Blanchette, S.A.

Dédicace . . .

Frère Vianney Tremblay, arrivé ici du Canada en 1942, n'a cessé de nous donner l'exemple du plus parfait dévouement jusqu'à son transfert au Collège. Pendant les dernières quatre années de son séjour de dix-sept ans, nous l'avons vu distribuant les draps, à la tête des travailleurs les mercredi et samedi après-midi, préparant pinceaux et couleurs dans son atelier de peinture, organisant la sacristie, nettoyant le gymnase, installant l'estrade pour une pièce ou un concert . . . ouvrier infatigable, ne refusant aucun service, partout et toujours. A cause de sa modestie et de sa fidélité dans la multiplicité de ses charges, il était devenu pour nous un précieux collaborateur mais il nous semblait que nous avions oublié que l'on ne pouvait rien faire sans lui. Les gradués de 1960 cependant se sont rappelés tout cela et ne veulent pas qu'un souvenir si attachant tombe dans l'oubli. C'est pourquoi nous dédions ce livre à vous, Frère Vianney Tremblay, A.A.

EDGAR A. BOURQUE, A.A.

Dean of Studies

Few men dedicate themselves as entirely to students in their care as does Father Edgar Bourque. His complete devotion to the class of 1960 has taken myriad forms, and whether plea, warning or exhortation, with each he aimed at our complete development. Long lines of students waiting outside his office, the tachistoscope, Charlie Brown slogans, "no regressions," interesting sermons and assembly talks: are all indications of his vitality and versatility. Fine example like his goes often unnoticed, even more often, unappreciated.

We of 1960 simply wish to say that we notice and appreciate — deeply.

PHILIP E. BONVOULOIR, A.A.

Dean of Students

In his last two years in office, Father Philip has proved himself to be the encouraging, occasionally lenient and mild priest whom students usually hope will be named Dean of Students. He is always on the go in a feverish attempt to carry out his duties. Notable and memorable are his talks so meticulously prepared for his weekly assemblies aimed at improving the manners, dress, and personal appearance of the student body. Fr. Philip's understanding, consideration, and zeal to make us gentlemen will long be recalled by the class of 1960.

History . . .

The best Senior history is the collection of personal memories which each Senior stores away with his books, trophies, athletic equipment and all the rest as he prepares to leave Assumption. That is why we have omitted the usual tale of the class that came up the hill in '56 and went down four years later (more or less). All we offer are four poetic summaries (with apologies to William Shakespeare) of those wonderful years, four soliloquies of '60's modern Hamlets whose too solid flesh was too tough to melt, who fretted, strutted, lamented and finally regretted that the time had come to leave Assumption — and a few helps for failing memories in the years ahead.

At Christmas 1956, we wondered . . .

"To stay or not to stay: that is it, freshmen:

Whether 'tis wiser at the Prep to suffer

The tasks and quizzes of relentless profs,

Or to throw up arms amid these scholars' troubles,

And by failing, leave them? To fail: to flunk;

No more; and by a flunk to say we end

The mis'ry and the thousand upperclass knocks

That frosh is heir to. 'Tis an Assumption

Most surely to be weighed. To fail, to flunk;

To flunk: perchance to leave. Aye, there's the rub;

For in that fatal flunk what griefs may come

When we have bid farewell to Monkish toil,

Must give us pause: there's the respect

That makes a tragedy of so much study;

For who would bear the Friday nights in dorm,

The Saturdays in class, the low man's campussing,

The pangs of undismissed droves, the day's delay,

The Adamant in office, and the spurns

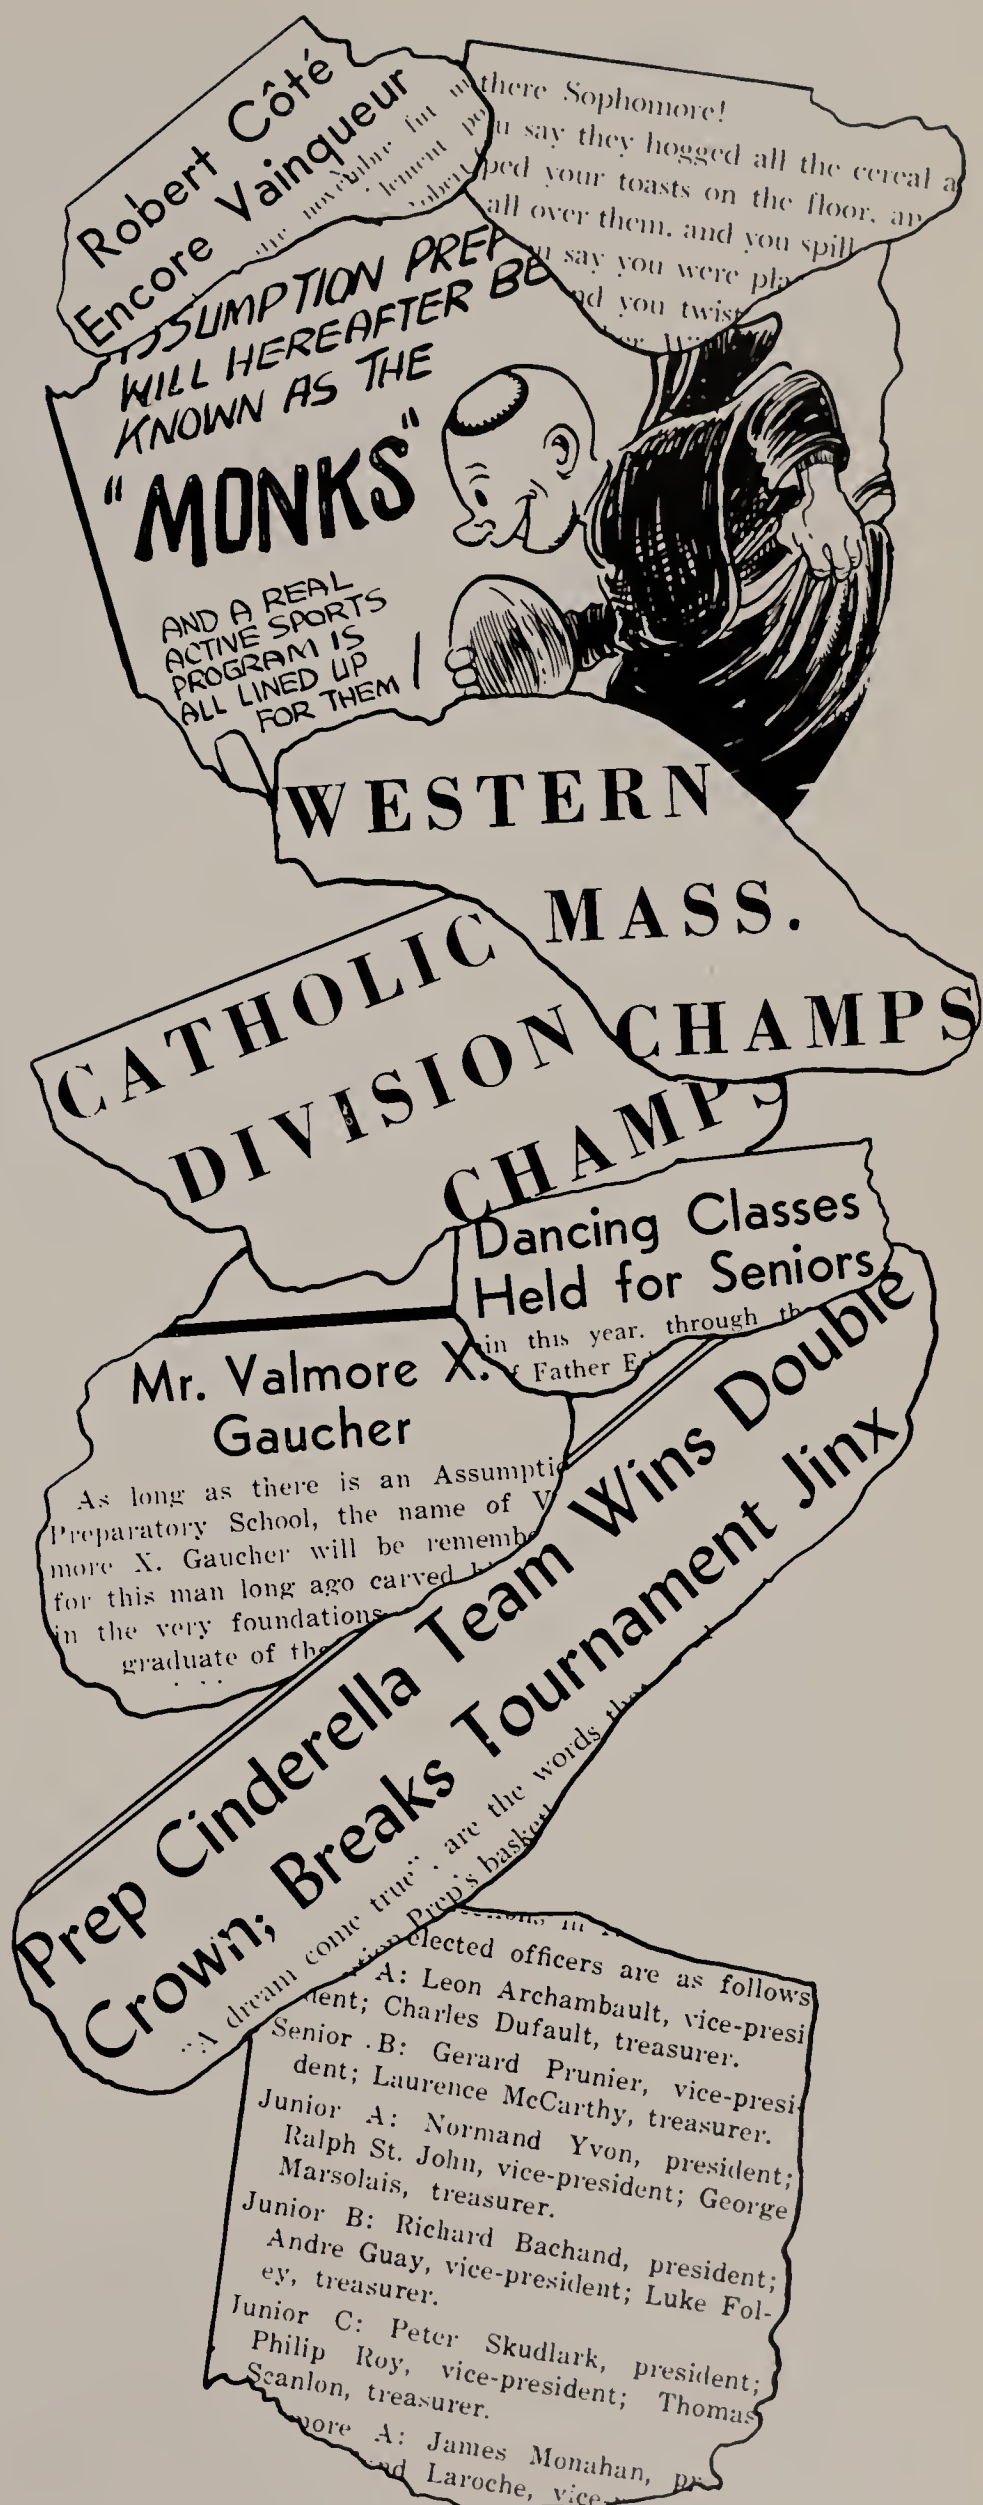

That patient student of the Deanery takes,

When he himself might his hiatus make

With a mere mid-year."

In the fall of '57, we moaned . . .
 "O, profs! profs!
 How dreary, dry, dull, and depressing
 Seem to us all the studies you urge!
 Fie on't! ah, fie! 'tis an unheeded burden
 That's get no heed; ping-pong and whist in rec hall
 Replace it merely. That it should come to this!
 But two years here: nay, not so much not two;
 So obedient a thing: that was to this,
 Docility to Expulsion; so loving to the rule book
 That we might not beteem the winds of heaven
 Visit a page too roughly. Latin and math!
 Must we remember? why we would hang on them,
 Until surcease of interest did groan
 From what it read on: and yet within a year; —
 Let me not think on't — Gaiety, thy name is soph'more!
 A little year, still ere those books were sold
 With which we followed our poor teachers' courses,
 Like Arguses, all eyes: — why we, even we —
 A clod who brays, "I hates dis course of Inglish,"
 Would have waited longer — defected for a TAB list,
 Our book report's kin, but no more like book reports,
 Than we to Socrates — . . ."

After the first Junior monthlies, we thundered . . .
 "Oh what a robbed and fleeced wight am I!
 Is it not heinous that this Junior here,
 But in a tantrum, in a fit of passion,
 Can tear his hair so in his disbelief,
 That lacking eighty, all his visage wann'd,
 Tears in his eyes, reduction in pleasantry,
 Broken spirit, and his 'roused temper seething —

All forms of over-grief — he vents — for nothing!
For Honor Roll!

What's Honor Roll to him, or he to Honor Roll
That he should weep for it? What would he do
Had he the sixty — that cue for passion —
As I have? He would drown the hall with tears,
And blister student ears with torrid speech,
Make sad the callous and incense the meek,
Convert the obdurate, and amaze indeed
A very faculty all eyes and ears! Yet I —
A slow and ment'ly muddled dullard mope
Like a beatnik who, idling in his pad,

And with Senior prelims and orals ahead,
we just groaned . . .

"How all occasions do conspire against us
And slow our quick dispatch! What is this Prep
If its chief good and market of its time
Be but to sweat and fret? A grind — no less!
Sure they that made for us such a large course
Looking before and after, gave us naught
For achievement and godlike application;
Thus left us so bemused. Now whether it be
Bestial indolence or some quixotic habit
Of seeing too prematurely THE EVENT,
A dream which quarter'd hath one part optimism
And always three parts sloth, we do not know.
Why must we always say, "This work's to do,"
Since we have cause and will, talent and time to do it? Presently to be graduated
Is not to stare with great anticipation
But to find inspiration for exams
When diploma's at stake. . . ."
